What's in Season – in South Carolina!

Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, announces that it's a great time to buy South Carolina grown seasonal produce and products including peaches, berries, and shrimp. He says to be on the lookout for the Certified SC Grown logo in your local supermarket and Buy South Carolina! Nothing's Fresher. Nothing's Finer!

Peaches - South Carolina growers have a good supply of just-picked, tree-ripened fresh, sweet peaches this season. Look for South Carolina's 'tastier' peaches in supermarkets, roadside markets, farmers markets and wherever produce is sold.

Berries - It's a berry good time for SC berries! Blackberry and blueberry harvest has begun in many parts of South Carolina. Strawberries are still available as well.

Cooking with Certified SC Grown

In an effort to encourage folks to try and buy Certified South Carolina Grown while supporting agricultural education efforts, the SCDA is supporting the sale of several cookbooks published by the SC Farm Bureau. The cookbooks enable veteran and novice chefs of all ages to prepare foods with Certified SC Grown produce and products in season.

The Golden Taste of South Carolina, a reprint of Farm Bureau's 50th Anniversary Cookbook from 1994, and SC Ladies & Gents Love to Cook which features over 600 mouth-watering recipes are both hardback, concealed wire cookbooks published by the SC Farm Bureau Women's Committee. These two cookbooks retail for $20.00 each plus $5.00 each for shipping and handling.

And...by the way, it's hurricane season

It always seems as though it's one more thing to have to think about. Like the Boy Scouts always say 'Be Prepared' and no time is it more important to be prepared than hurricane season - which officially started on June 1. Now is the time for farmers and livestock owners to start thinking ahead as to how to prepare and respond if our state is hit with a hurricane this season.

It's still hard for me to believe that Hurricane Hugo struck the South Carolina coast as a Category 4 hurricane twenty-one years ago. It seems like just a short while ago our house was full of cousins and friends who had evacuated from Charleston, and realized they hadn't quite gotten out of the way of that massive storm. Damage estimates were $7 billion in the mainland United States. Although South Carolina has not been hit directly since Hurricane Hugo, we still need to be vigilant and prepared for a hurricane or any natural disaster. The longer we go without a major storm, the more the law of averages is working against us.

Colorado State University's Department of Atmospheric Science is calling for an above-average hurricane season, estimating there will be 11 to 16 named storms and six to eight of those will be hurricanes this year. Three to five will be major storms ranking anywhere from Category 3 to 5 with sustained winds of 111 mph or greater.

it's hurricane season,

Charleston Original Sauces of Mt. Pleasant, SC will be featured in the showroom on July 14-16 and Sally’s Gourmet Food of Columbia, SC on July 17-19.

In January of 2009, the SCSFA leased space in the West Wing of the AmericasMart. South Carolina is the only state in the nation to have a permanent showroom at AmericasMart specifically designed for a state’s specialty foods.

AmericasMart Atlanta is the largest permanent wholesale marketplace of its kind with over 7.7 million square feet of space in three buildings attended by over a half million buyers each year. As an AmericasMart exhibitor, SCSFA members have access to the buyers from around the world 6 times a year. Companies who were selling their products solely in South Carolina before they participated, now have their product in stores around the nation.

The cost of the showroom is funded by Specialty Food Association members themselves who use the showroom. The show enables our state’s companies collectively to leverage the full power of the largest wholesale gift and home furnishings marketplace in the nation.

There is a 64 percent chance that at least one major hurricane will make landfall on the U.S. coastline in 2010. For the U.S. East Coast, including the Florida Peninsula, the probability of a major hurricane making landfall is 40 percent.

This time of the year I always encourage farmers and livestock owners to prepare for potential severe weather. Don't wait until there is an evacuation order to think about how to deal with your livestock and other animals. Food, water, shelter, and possibly relocating animals are a top concern for animal and livestock owners. Animals, both large and small, should not become victims of a storm. Make sure you have enough supplies on hand to last 72 hours and a place to store feed and fuel to keep it out of the elements. Feed is no good if it's wet.

There are resources available to help farmers and their families plan ahead with their emergency plans for hurricane season. In addition to your county emergency management offices, there are resources through SC Emergency Management Division, Clemson, FEMA and our office. Also, visit www.agriculture.sc.gov and click on Livestock Emergencies.

A good checklist is always good advice. Don't do as I am often guilty of and forget where you put the list. With a list, you won't forget things when the weather turns and it gets hectic. A little prior planning can save a headache. I believe it was Benjamin Franklin who so wisely said, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Here are several tips for residents to think about while planning for a hurricane or any natural disaster:

- Ensure animal vaccinations and other health requirements are up-to-date.
- If possible, make arrangements in advance for evacuation of horses.
- Emergency contact information for vets, and of course family and friends.
- Make sure trailers for carrying animals are current on maintenance.
- Keep food and potable water for animals on hand.

Some of the questions people should think about now are: Do I have a place to board my animals if my county is evacuated? And what are my evacuation routes?

You may want to take pictures of property and equipment before a storm. This can come in handy during insurance claims. And carry animal health and vaccination records with you during an evacuation.

I hope these tips will help you plan for what I hope we never have to deal with in our state.

America’s Farmers Grow Communities Project to provide $2,500 Awards in 14 South Carolina Counties

South Carolina farmers have the opportunity to win awards to help community non-profit organizations that are dear to their hearts. The awards are available through Monsanto Fund’s America’s Farmers Grow Communities Project, a new program offered in select counties in California, Kansas, Nebraska, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina and South Dakota. Through the program, farmers can enter to win the chance to direct $2,500 awards to local non-profit organizations that are important to them and their communities.

Farmers, age 21 and over, who are actively engaged in farming a minimum of 250 acres of corn, soybeans and/or cotton, or 40 acres of open field vegetables, or at least 10 acres of tomatoes, peppers and/or cucumbers grown in protected culture, are eligible. The application period began May 1 and runs through July 31. The program is open to all qualifying farmers, and no purchase is necessary in order to enter or win.

In South Carolina, one winner will be drawn from each of the state’s 14 participating counties. Eligible counties include: Allendale, Calhoun, Clarendon, Darlington, Dillon, Florence, Hampton, Horry, Lee, Marion, Marlboro, Orangeburg, Sumter, and Williamsburg.

The program is intended to benefit non-profit community groups such as ag youth organizations, schools and other civic groups. Farmers can apply online at www.growcommunities.com or by calling 877-267-3332 to obtain an application. One winner per county will be selected at random for each eligible county and announced in August.

USDA Issues Final Rule for Conservation Stewardship Program

Sign-up extended to June 25th

USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) has published the final regulations governing the Conservation Stewardship Program (CSP). Authorized in the 2008 Farm Bill, CSP is a voluntary program that offers payments to producers who exercise good land stewardship and want to improve their conservation performance. Changes to the program expand access, increase payment limits, and promote greater environmental benefit while maintaining program goals.

The current enrollment period for CSP has been extended an additional two weeks, now closing June 25, 2010, when applications will be scored, ranked, and funded.

To apply, call or visit a local USDA Service Center, listed online at offices.usda.gov, or in the telephone book under United States Government, Agriculture Department.

Cotton Grower Nominations Sought for 2010 P.I.E. Program

Two cotton growers from South Carolina will have the opportunity to participate in the upcoming 2010 Producer Information Exchange (P.I.E.) Program. The tour is entirely paid for through a joint partnership between The Cotton Foundation and Bayer CropScience. Any South Carolina cotton grower is eligible to apply.

Now in its 22nd year, the P.I.E. program enables cotton producers to improve yields and fiber quality along with boosting their overall operation’s efficiency by: 1) gaining new perspectives in such fundamental practices as land preparation, planting, fertilization, pest control, irrigation and harvesting and 2) observing firsthand the unique ways in which their innovative peers are using new and existing technology.

Upon completion of this year’s tours, the P.I.E. program will have exposed nearly 900 U.S. cotton producers to innovative production practices in regions different than their own.

Nominations for the tour must be submitted to David Ruppenicker, Southern Cotton Growers, Inc., 706-344-1212, david@southern-southeastern.org by June 18.
